Introduction.

We cherish with veneration the memory of our ancestors, for wisdom and decision of character. They came to seek in America freedom to worship God according to the dictates of their conscience.

1686544

The two brothers, John and James Antram, were of the faith called Friends or Quakers. They lived an honorable and upright life; their children following the example set them and for several generations were true to the faith of their fathers. They were married by Friends' or Quaker ceremony and also their children. In some branches that ceremony has been used until the present time.

John Antram brought with him a grant of land or proprietor-right, a copy of which is in this book, and also the oldest deeds of property owned by him. I have other papers and deeds of John Antram, but did not think it needful to publish them. On some of these papers at his signature is found the imprints of the seal, which is found in this book, which is not to be found on any state records in this country. With the help of it we are in hopes to be able to trace our family to the old country, and in so doing may find them as honorable and upright as the two brothers we call our ancestors.

This family is noted for keeping homesteads in the family. John Antram's homestead has been in the family of his oldest son John for six generations, in five of which it has been left from father to son. A part of it is still the homes of two of his descendants; also the property he left his son Thomas is still owned by one of that family. His brother James' homestead I found through records was owned by his descendants for several generations. We shall find it of later dates, and in other states; the homestead of Caleb Antram, of Fayette county, Pennsylvania, is owned by one of the third generation.

Some may ask why this change of spelling occurs. In all the old papers of John Antram and his sons the name is spelt Antram. Sometimes the "o" is used and sometimes the "u," but never the "i." I suppose there are several reasons why we spell it with "i"; some made the change thinking it the proper way, and others followed this example.

In compiling this book I have spent much time and considerable money in tracing the family, and hope it will give satisfaction. I have divided it in eleven parts. At the beginning these parts represent the seven children of John and the four of James, and have taken each as the family branches, and have followed them to the six generations (when they could be found.) At the end of each branch a blank leaf will be found on which future records can be added. In a work of this kind, embracing, as it does, several branches, there will be some errors and omissions, so if any have further information concerning any branches of the family, I desire them to communicate their information to me, so that it may be used in future editions.

NOTE.

An old log house which was occupied by John Antram during the first few years he lived on his farm is still standing in the Joseph Antram homestead farm, but as it has been weather-boarded and other buildings have been built against it, it was impossible to get a picture of it that would represent it as it was. It is seventeen feet wide and twenty-eight feet long, and is divided into two rooms, with a loft over them.

Obituary.

Joseph Stockton Antrim was born December 16, 1802, on the old homestead opposite Deacon Station, where four generations of his family had lived before him, holding the property under a deed dated 1698. When he was about seven years old his parents moved to another part of the same farm, a few hundred yards nearer to Burlington, here he lived until a few years ago, when he moved into a new house which he had built close by and he spent in quietness and peace the closing years of his long life.

He was of Quaker parentage and the principles and doctrines of that sect largely shaped his life. In politics he was a Whig until the birth of the Republican party, when he warmly adopted the principles of that party and always openly and boldly showed his colors. He believed it to be a privilege as well as a duty to vote and nothing would be allowed to keep him from attending to his duty at the polls on election day. Every Whig candidate for the presidency from John Quincy Adams down to 1856 had his vote and every Republican candidate from Fremont to Harrison. He lived under the administration of every president of the United States except George Washington and John Adams. He was a man with strict and correct ideas of right and was just in all his dealings. Perhaps his most marked characteristic was kindness and thoughtfulness for every living thing. Any abuse of man or beast would arouse his indignation. It was a pleasure to him to see man and beast eat heartily and none went hungry-around him. The poor man found in him a friend who was always ready to help him in his difficulties and none appealed to him in vain. The widow and orphan were relieved and helped by him and he took pleasure in such kind acts. He remained single until after he was forty years old and then married Elizabeth Dobbins, who died about eight years ago.

Five children were born to them (two sons and three daughters) all of whom are still living.

He enjoyed reading his Bible and until his sight failed spent much time in that way, and when he could no longer see to read, he found pleasure in recalling its teachings and history.

But the longest life comes to an end at last and so the end came in this case. On February 18, 1895, the kind heart ceased to beat, and the eyes that had looked out on the changes of almost a century, closed to open no more on earthly scenes. He retained his mental vigor to the last, and it was a pleasure to converse with him about matters around him. He continued to manifest an interest in family, state and national affairs on down to his last sickness, which was of about two weeks' duration, and was probably the longest sickness of his whole life. As he lay in his coffin, no one who did not know his age, could have guessed it within twenty-five years. His head was thickly covered with hair, which was only slightly tinged with gray.

They all settled in Stafford County, moving from there to Culpepper Co. and from there to Frederick County, where the records show they were members of Hopewell Friends Meeting.

The views of the Friends concerning slavery were not popular in Virginia and many of the Antrims went up into the southern counties of Pennsylvania. This was about 1800.

Obituary.

Mrs. Bethia Hancock was born September 9, 1786, at Bordentown, N. J. She was the daughter of Isaac and Ruth Antrim. She attended school about six months in Bordentown, which was the whole of her schooling. She was married in 1812 to Elisha Hancock, who died in 1870; aged 91 years and three days. He was her senior seven years, and they lived together for fifty-eight years. They moved to Preble county, Ohio, near Somerville, in 1813. They made the trip in their own conveyance. Five children were born to them, three daughters and two sons; but she out-lived them all. One died in 1848, and three were swept away by the cholera scourge in 1849. The fifth was the Rev. William Hancock, who died at his home in Somerville, Ohio, about 2 years before his mother. In the sturdy pioneer days it was the lot of all to work, and Mrs. Hancock's work was that of a coat-maker. She was famous through all the country-side for her skill in coat making. She had learned the trade before her marriage, and during her early years in the West, prosecuted it with vigor in the log cabin in the forest that was her first western home. Her cabin had little light, save such as shone down the chimney, and she had chills every other day, yet during her first winter in this home, besides attending to the usual household business, she made forty coats entirely by hand. She trained many hands in the craft.

On her ninety-ninth birthday, she had her picture taken, which was the last one. It shows a noble face, with large eyes having an expression of great calmness; a firm set mouth and chin and a prominent nose, indicating her intelligence and force of character.

It was the expectation, had Mrs. Hancock lived out a hundred years, to have appropriately celebrated the event, and among those designing to participate in the celebration were several persons whose first dress coats and wedding coats were the work of her hand. During nearly thirty of her residence in Preble county, it was Mrs. Hancock's custom to carry produce to market, and in doing so she often traveled after night, through dense forests and high waters, and various dangers quite alone or else attended only by a small boy.

They removed to Richmond, Indiana, in 1852, and immediately took up their abode in the house in which she died. Here sixteen years before her, her husband died.

Mrs. Hancock was one of the original Hicksite Friends, having been brought into the society by the preaching of Elias Hicks himself. She was ever a most earnest and active one; being never too busy to attend the meetings and promote the society work and never too poor to contribute to its charities. She was frugal in after life as in early, though possessed in after life of a comfortable maintenance, but she was a free giver, notwithstanding, to all good and worthy causes. But the flickering lamp did not quite hold out; never, though, was such a weight of years worn more lightly, nor at last put off more peacefully, than Mrs. Hancock's. She was a woman of great force of character as well as strength of body and this is a needful combination to the living of a hard, long life comfortably to one's self and one's friends. Mrs. Hancock departed this life August, 1886, aged 99 years, 11 months, and 4 days.

As recorded on page 71 Godfrey's uncles Daniel and John and his Aunt Martha had moved to Virginia about 1760. Godfrey had heard marvelous tales of the frontier and when he was about seventeen he left home without the consent of his father. It is not known whether he ever caught up with his relatives or not is ~~not known~~. We know he was in Culpepper in 1776 as there is where he married Hannah Hayes or Haynes (the records seem to have it both ways). A census of Frederick Co., Va. in 1782 indicates that he was living there at that time with his wife and five of his children.

Later he moved to Tennessee where he died.

His wife and children moved to Clinton County, Ohio about 1801, and to Delaware Co. Ind. in 1821.

(Dr.) Thomas Antrim (II) was born June 30, 1814 in Clinton Co., Ohio. When six years of age he came with his parents to Wayne Co., Ind. where he lived about 16 years. He then moved to Wabash Co. and thence to Jasper Co., Ind. in 1853.

Dec. 27, 1838 he married Lucinda W. Massey, daughter of Robert, and Rebecca L. (Butler) Massey, natives of North Carolina and Georgia (also Quakers).

His earliest and strongest desire was for the practice of medicine. He did much reading in his youth to fit himself for this profession and after his marriage applied himself thoroughly to its study. As a result he was called upon to serve as "Doctor" in the then frontier settlement. He was a Whig in politics, having cast his first vote for Henry Clay. Afterward he became a follower of Lincoln and his Quaker upbringing helped to strengthen his natural Anti-slavery sentiments. He was a conductor on the "Underground Railway". He was elected Recorder of Jasper Co., Ind. just prior to his death in 1888 (Oct. 23d).
